[20 marks]

Tsɔmɔ sane nɛɛ shishi kɛba Ga mli.

5. In the evening, we went to the residence of Mr Osafo. There were nearly twenty Ghanaians there when we arrived. Mr Osafo and his wife, Mansa, were pleased to see me.

Some of the Ghanaians we met included pilots, doctors, university lecturers and engineers. They were all highly qualified and gainfully employed.

A feeling of shame ran through my veins. Here I was, a rolling stone, sitting among fellow Ghanaians who were working and were held in high honour and respect. I, on the other hand, was thinking of the first menial job I would lay hands on because I had no qualification, nor had I learned any trade or vocation.

At one point, I interrupted them and said, "I envy you lucky people here". One of them said, "It is true that we have good jobs and enjoy facilities attached to them but we miss many things back home." Unlike Ghana where we could go to our favourite hotels or night clubs and relax till late in the night after a hard day's work, here we can't.
